How did Lincoln lead in turbulent times

The country was in unprecedented peril over the issue of a divided nation. Several Confederate States had already voted to secede the Union. The country was fully divided. Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Franklin Roosevelt, and many others had all been faced with the same leadership and personal journey of Presidents. As a matter of fact, they are their associated historical events. That can be learned from each of these men and women.

Leadership in Turbulent Times

As we move through the holiday season and into the new year, let’s reflect on what we value. People are miffed when they are doing a good job or are working hard to improve, but don’t get any recognition for it. Our students are learning, our communities are changing, and keeping the good work flowing doesn’t just happen by itself. It takes recognition. With the results that they have achieved, they matter. Acknowledging others is an important aspect of good leadership.

To its credit, a leadership task force has already been created to start changing their approach to celebrations. As a school or district leader, what is your job but to see your nanoseconds and actions of great celebration, to shape the next generation? It is very important! Make it a priority to recognize those who are working hard and keep the good work flowing.

As we move forward, let’s focus on recognizing our employees who are good at their jobs, as well as areas for celebration and areas for improvement. Overall, it has been successful. Our students are learning, our communities are changing, and area of growth are celebrated, to keep the good work flowing doesn’t just happen by itself. It takes recognition. With the results that they have achieved, they matter. Acknowledging others is an important aspect of good leadership.

2. It seems simple, but the first word of the process is “acknowledge” for improvement. Overall, it has been successful.
